

Racing to Save Lives

I decided to take on the Challenge of a life time and enter the Madrid, Spain Marathon. I have a minimum fund raising goal of $6000.00 and I am hoping to surpass that!

Im Sooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo excited!!! Biggest challenge of my life right here! I am a survivor myself I had a full complete hysterectomy at age 25 due to severe Endometriosis that saw my cells mutating, with a cancer scare on the horizon my doctor told me its best to have the surgery. Due to complications of that surgery and the condition my body was in I had a 50% chance of survival of the surgery it self.

So at 25 the young wife and mother of 2 girls I was faced with trying to live my life with certain cancer of the cervix uterus and bowls, maybe have 5 years to live . OR have the surgery with a 50% chance of surviving the operation but then have a free and clear bill of health if successful.

I took my chances and here I am!!!

I seem to be given a lot of things to over come in my short life of 35 years thus far and thought it was time to give back in a major way!

I know that millions of people suffer every day and I certainly hope to end that for them. I actually attended a funeral for a young boy at my daughter s school who lost his battle with Leukemia and while I didn't know him personally, as part of the Eastmount Park School family, I felt the loss of a sweet 8 year old boy, Gavin Foster.

Today I am training for him and countless others to avoid that same sad ending.
